EASTERN COLLEGE GIRLS FROWN ON MATES' SMOKING

Bryn Mawr Only School for Girls Where it is Encouraged

New York, Nov. 25—(AP)—Apparently smoking is frowned upon by most of the large eastern girls colleges.

Disagreeing with Bryn Mawr, which recently set aside a smoking room in each dormitory, several other colleges have either forbidden smoking outright or deferred action on the matter. At some colleges there are no restrictions, but the habit is discouraged.

John Bull has lifted his eyes in surprise. London papers have published the Bryn Mawr item as a curiosity. The London council with 26,000 women in its classes, permits smoking, and so does the University of London whose thousands of women students have their own clubs where they smoke.

Goucher College at Baltimore about a month ago forbade students to smoke in college buildings or public places.

At Wesley a proposal that smoking be permitted off the campus was defeated last week. The practice is forbidden at colleges.

Raucoffe and West Virginia forbid smoking.

Permitted at Vassar

At Vassar the habit is a matter of the individual's conscience, but the rules disapprove it as injurious to the health. The students, however, have voted against outright prohibition.

Nearly half the girls at Vassar have admitted they smoke. When Bryn Mawr took action the other day it was announced that less than half the students there smoked.

At Barnard smoking has never been forbidden. Last week, by a vote of 33 to 42, Mount Holyoke girls voted for smoking. The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, co-educational, has permitted girl students to smoke at undergraduate social affairs. At Smith College action has been deferred on the matter until spring.

Bryn Mawr alumnae seemed pleased over the lifting of restrictions.

Smoking May Decrease

Mrs. Warren Thorpe, president of the New York Bryn Mawr club said she felt that the new rule would have the general approval of the alumnae. "It is felt the girls smoke anyway," she said, "and it is better for them to do it openly than secretly. Smoking may decrease now that it is no longer forbidden."

Mrs. Alfred Hess, wife of a physician and mother of a Bryn Mawr student, said, "I don't like girls smoking, but I see much harm in any prohibition on the conduct of the college girls. They should make their own decisions."

Another Bryn Mawr graduate, Mary Towle, assistant district attorney of New York county, said "Smoking is purely a question of taste, with no moral or ethical elements involved. My taste runs against smoking for women in public."

Miss M. V. Luby, assistant to Dean Gildersleeve of Barnard College, said that while Barnard has never had a rule against smoking, it is discouraged by medical lecturers as injurious to the health.

ILLINOIS GIRLS DON'T
Springfield, Nov. 25—(AP)—Most college women in Illinois do not smoke, if the college deans of women may be taken as authority.

Miss Olive Austin, dean of women at the Illinois Women's College, said the women students had taken specific action against it, and whoever was caught smoking was tried by the student body. "We do not have smoking," said Miss Austin. "We don't permit it. Our student government disapproves very decidedly."

Miss Austin said she was confident all women's colleges in Illinois held the same attitude. She mentioned Monticello Seminary at Godfrey, and the Rockford College.

U. S. COMMUTES CHAPMAN'S TERM IN FED. PRISON

Bandit's Effort to Avoid Hanging Thereby is Balked

BULLETIN
Hartford, Conn., Nov. 25—(AP)—Gerald Chapman has informed his counsel that he will not accept Presidential commutation to his robbery sentence.

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 25—(AP)—The federal sentence of Gerald Chapman has been commuted by President Coolidge. The executive order terminating the sentence of 25 years imposed in the federal court at New York for the robbery of a mail truck was signed by the President Monday evening and was made public today when the document was delivered to Warden Scott for service on Chapman.

The official document which terminated federal interest in Gerald Chapman, was brought back to Hartford by State's Attorney Alcorn and the action marked another step in the effort of the state of Connecticut to execute Chapman for the murder of Policeman Skelly of New Britain on Oct. 12, 1924.

Pictures of Old Time

High School Athletes

Robert Sterling has arranged a very attractive and interesting display of football pictures in one of the windows at his store on Galena avenue. Many of the alumni of the Dixon high school were viewing the pictures of football teams of 25 years past this afternoon, as well as some track and basketball teams. Some of the old timers claimed that this has been the most successful year in high school football in Dixon in the history of the school. In 1901, it was said, Dixon won from every team but one, that being LaSalle. That year LaSalle defeated Dixon on the former's ground by a 5 to 0 score and at a return game here, Dixon turned the tables, thus giving the local school a claim to a championship, although conferences were unheard of in that day.

MRS. HARCO AND HOLT FREED OF MURDER CHARGE

Waukegan, Ill., Nov. 25—(AP)—An acquittal was returned by the jury trying Mrs. Clara Harco and Arthur Holt, her step-father, on charges of murdering Mrs. Lillie Holt, her mother and his wife, in the Holt home at Fox Lake last September. Albert Harco, husband of Clara, accused of an accessory also was freed.

The trial revolved around whether pistol wounds in Mrs. Holt's head and abdomen were self-inflicted. The defense maintained she shot herself after a violent quarrel on Sept. 20, when Holt and the Harco's returned home late from playing golf and Mrs. Holt said they had kept dinner waiting.

The prosecution contended the nature of the wounds prevented a suicide theory.

Holt and Mrs. Harco testified that they did not see the shooting and that Mrs. Holt had gone in another room. Harco said he had left after the quarrel, but before the shooting.

THE PROSECUTION CONTENDED THE NATURE OF THE WOUNDS PREVENTED A SUICIDE THEORY.

PAID $132,000 FOR LOSS CROP ROCHELLE PEAS

What is believed to be the largest amount ever received for crop damage insurance in northern Illinois, was represented today in a check for $132,000 paid the Rochelle Canneries, Inc., as a result of damage to the pea crop caused by late frosts last spring.

The damage represented the appraised value of more than 4,000 acres of early peas that were killed last May in a late frost. A 3,000 acre tract of corn escaped damage. The total crop, according to officials at the Rochelle plant, was valued at $500,000.

The insurance premium on the entire crop cost $30,000 officials announced today.

HOLD ASSEMBLY RESPONSIBLE TO ELECTORS ALONE

Legislators' Committee Prepares Answer to Fergus' Action

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 25—(AP)—A committee of five lawyer members of the 54th general assembly outlined the brief they will file before the supreme court in the reapportionment case, in a meeting with Attorney General Carlstrom here today. They will take the attitude that the legislature is responsible to no one but its constituents.

The pleading they will make before the supreme court next Tuesday will be in the form of a motion to dismiss and quash the writ filed by John Fergus, Chicago. Their attitude will be that the legislature is not responsible to the supreme court, the governor nor anyone but the voters of Illinois.

So far 104 downstate members of the last legislature have joined in the action against Fergus. This includes 18 of the 42 downstate senators.

REPUBLICANS TO MOVE SLOW WITH THE INSURGENTS

Washington, Nov. 25—(AP)—Republican leaders are showing a disposition to move slowly in dealing with insurgent republicans in the organization of the new house with their program for speedy action on the tax reduction bill.

Plan has been tentatively advanced to postpone organization of most of the house committee entirely until the tax bill is disposed of, probably just before the Christmas recess.

Such a course obviously also would defer the whole question of how far the republican organization will carry out the policy decided on in caucus last spring of withholding important committee assignments from members of the party who supported the presidential candidacy of R. M. La Follette.

The delay will give opportunity to induce the intentions of some of those listed as insurgents by their votes not only on the tax bill but also on organization of the house.

There has been no definite information so far of what path the insurgents will follow at the coming session.

The tax reduction bill already is regarded as certain to be subjected to some attempts at amendment. Representative Rainey, Illinois, and Hull, Tennessee, democratic members of the ways and means committee which unanimously ordered the bill reported, also have announced that minority views on the non-partisan measure will be presented to the house.

Mitchell's Defense is Nearing Conclusion

Washington, Nov. 25—(AP)—The defense in the court martial trial of Col. William Mitchell began winding up its case today in a peaceful atmosphere. In marked contrast to the tenseness noticeable for the last two days, when the accused officer occupied the stand.

Representative Reid of Illinois, Col. Mitchell's counsel, announced at the outset that his case would be completed before tonight, but the activity of the prosecution in arranging rebuttal testimony indicated that end was some distance away.

It is considered certain that Maj. Gen. Summerall, commanding the Second Corps Area and former president of the court, will be brought in by the prosecution. The general, who quit the court after a protest had been lodged against him by the defense, has been ordered to hold himself in readiness to appear.

Col. H. A. White, military counsel of the defense, today resumed his reading of voluminous official correspondence, congressional committee air service hearings and reports taken from the war and navy department's files regarding aviation questions generally.

ATTORNEYS AND JUDGES NOT ALL FOR PROHIBITION

—REPRESENTATIVE DEVINE TELLS CO. JUDGE HE'S SEEN THEM PAY LITTLE ATTENTION

Some attorneys and judges are not inclined to pay much attention to the Illinois prohibition law, according to a statement made by Representative John P. Devine in the course of an argument before Judge William L. Leach, in which Attorneys Devine of this city and John Buckley of Amboy, representing James Kelly of Amboy, presented motions to quash the information on the ground that it was improperly drawn, and also to impose the evidence.

On the latter motion, Attorney Devine in his argument stated: "The prosecution of liquor cases has become a mania in many counties and this prohibition law is one which is more or less violated as suits pleasure. I have attended functions at which lawyers and judges were present, and at which there was little evidence of intention to pay much attention to the Illinois prohibition law."

Proceeding with his arguments to impose the evidence, Attorney Devine charged that some of the men who had been arrested and fined and others who had served jail sentences, were now helping enforce the prohibition laws in Lee county.

"Time to Call Nat," he said, "and for some of these officers to take a lunch. If a law enforcing officer has a right to take a bottle from a man's possession, he has a right to take a watch or his money if he is looking for counterfeit money. If the deputy sheriffs of this county understand the law, they will resign their jobs. The officers had no right, as we will show in many cases to be cited, to take a bottle from this man without the necessary legal process. There was no search warrant and we contend that the person is just as sacred as the home and probably more so when the humiliation of being searched by an officer on the public street is considered."

Judge Leach listened to arguments on both motions during the morning and at the noon hour recessed until 1:30, stating that he would pronounce his decision this afternoon.

Kelly was arrested in Amboy last May by deputies and brought to the county jail here charged with possessing and transporting intoxicating liquor.

Blackmail Charge Preferred Against Freeport Couple

Freeport, Ill., Nov. 24—Released from jail on her own bond of $500, Mrs. Viola Kampmeier, 35-year-old divorcee and mother of three children, who is charged with having obtained money by extortion from Paul Finicle and Al Groulx, young married men, will be at liberty until her case is heard in county court some day next week.

The charge against Mrs. Kampmeier is not as serious as those against the three Freeport youths arrested several weeks ago, as the woman is accused of having made demands for money only, while the others threatened death to their victims unless the money was forthcoming.

On that account the case can be handled in county court.

The penalty, if the woman should be found guilty, is a fine of $500 or a year in jail, or both, at the discretion of the court.

There were no new developments in the case today, State's Attorney L. A. Jayne said.

DEMAND POLICE BE HELD

Chicago, Nov. 25—(AP)—A demand that the police be held responsible by the coroner's jury for the killing of Lloyd Austin, slain in a bungled police trap in which Martin Durkin shot his way out, was made at the Austin inquest today. Members of the family previously charged before the coroner that Austin was killed by Police Sergeant Naughton, who, they said, was armed with a shot gun with which he was unfamiliar.

Durkin, gunman already has been indicted for killing Police Sergeant Harry Gray in the same fight.

Killed at Spot of Holdup 21 Months Ago in St. Louis

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 25—(AP)—John W. Chamberlin, 69, jewelry salesman, was shot and killed today by a masked man in the Terminal Railroad office building at the same spot where, exactly 21 months ago he was held up, kidnaped and robbed of $1,500 cash by two masked men. This time he resisted and saved $550 cash, but paid with his life. The robber fired eight or ten shots, five of which entered Chamberlin's body, and fled. Several persons narrowly escaped wounding.

Chamberlin made it a practice to visit the Terminal Railroad offices on the 10th and 25th of each month pay days, to collect from railroad employees on time payments. He usually carried about $1,000 to cash employees' checks.

LOONEY FIGHTS VICE EVIDENCE IN MURDER CASE

Opening Statements in Galesburg Trial on Friday?

Galesburg, Ill., Nov. 25—(AP)—Efforts to complete a jury for the trial of John Looney, in circuit court here for the murder in 1922 of William Gabel, Rock Island saloonkeeper, were resumed this morning when a special panel of 50 reported. The regular panel was exhausted yesterday after four jurors had been sworn and two more accepted by both sides. They will be sworn when two more are secured to complete the panel of four.

With the idea that the jury will be selected by Friday, the state is preparing its opening statement to be delivered by Attorney Charles Hadley of Wheaton, who will outline to the jury the inside story of vice conditions in Rock Island which led to the reign of terror and murder. According to Attorney Hadley, the state is preparing to say that evidence will prove the assertions that John Looney was the head of a crime ring which corrupted city officials and reached even to high city offices. The prosecution will picture Looney as king of the underworld and boss of the police department as well, he asserts.

Gabel's Death Ordered?

In this connection, it will be stated that Gabel's death was ordered when he broke with Looney, that the latter knew when and where the crime was to take place, and that the murder was to take place, and that the murder was actually discussed beforehand with the Rock Island chief of police. It is forecast that the state will attempt to show that Looney was even in at the death of the man, said to have formerly worked with him as the job of exacting toll from the underworld. Many of the witnesses against Looney will be his alleged former partners, who will tell their stories with the idea of lessening their own punishment.

While attorneys for Looney have made no definite statement relative to their plan of defense, it is believed they will oppose the admitting of any evidence, except that which may have a direct bearing on the murder of Gabel. Testimony relative to vice conditions and the play of crime prior to the killing will be excluded through out the trial if they have their way. Their aim is to show that Looney was not connected with the slaying.

PERMIT TO DIG UP ANY STREET NOW NECESSARY

Council Passes Emergency Ordinance Tuesday Night

A new emergency ordinance drawn for the purpose of halting the practice of excavating paved streets of the city without properly refilling, was passed last evening by the city council. At the same time a new ruling went into effect which will protect the city in the future. Applicants for a permit to open a street, will be required to deposit the sum of $15 where a cement street is to be opened, $10 where brick is to be removed and $5 for all other streets. The ordinance, being an emergency action, became effective at once.

George Prescott appeared before the council and asked permission to install a 15,000 gallon tank, under ground, at his north side storage plant, for the handling of fuel oil. A resolution transferring from the local improvement fund No. 214 to the street improvement fund, the sum of $200 was adopted. The sum represents a refund from the National Construction Company for work in the west end of the city.

The application of the Edison-Howell company to erect a sign at 113-115 East First street was referred to the commissioner of public health and safety.

Moerschbaeche Hits

Maples for Big Mark

Pete Moerschbaeche came near hanging up a new mark at the Pastime bowling alleys Tuesday evening in a practice game when he hit the maples for 266 pins. The Roxana Oil team took two strikes from the Penn Oil crew in a hotly contested series in the city tournament by the following scores:

"ELI'S OLD WOOD INDIAN" TO MOVE TO NEW LOCATION

Will Change His "Look-out" After About Half a Century

"Eli's Wooden Indian," that phlegmatic old bozo who has stood, a silent observer, for so many years in front of the famous old cigar store on First Street, is going to have a little variety. He is going to move. He is not going very far. Only a couple of doors east, in fact, but probably if you had stood in one spot for a half century, more or less, a move like that would seem like a long trip. By Saturday of this week this pioneer citizen, probably the only one in town who never has overstepped the limits of propriety, and who has, in fact, lived a "model life," will take up his new vigil in front of Stratton & Covert's new cigar store and coffee shop at 113 First Street, two doors east of the old stand. The old boy will have a more sumptuous back-scratcher than he ever had before, but we don't think he'll get lit up about it. He has a very philosophical nature and he's seen so much of life that it will take more than this to disturb him. The reporter watched him closely this morning while the bustle of moving was going on around him and he appeared not even to notice it.

Is Fine New Store.

A less stable character would certainly be a little heady about such a radical change in surroundings. If you don't believe go into the new store Saturday and take a look around. It is quite the finest thing in modern cigar stores and it really is a great credit to "Bob" Stratton and "Bill" Covert, the two owners. The new store is entirely equipped with new fittings and no expense has been spared to make it the most modern and nicely furnished store of its kind. The floor has been laid, the entire building, but at this time is planning to use only the main floor and balcony. The main floor is 35 by 35 and along the east side are the tobacco cases. They are fine double service cases, all zinc lined. On the other side of the room are the soda fountain, the latest thing in fountains, being a 16 foot case with a 22 foot marble service counter, the fountain equipped with Frigidaire, giving five different degrees of temperature, and the coffee shop. The coffee shop, which will not be in operation for about ten days, includes a modern steam table, lunch counter, etc., and will serve light lunches between the hours of 10 a. m. and midnight.

Add Several Lines.

The new store will also maintain a shoe-shining stand. The news and magazine stands will continue to be a feature of the institution and several other lines of merchandise, sporting goods, etc., will be handled.

This progressive move of Stratton & Covert's marks a radical change in the old cigar store, which is a sort of landmark in local history. It was close to half a century ago that Eli Rosenthal, that lovable old character whose name made the place famous in the early days, started as a young man in the little store nearby. The building he was in was destroyed by fire and he moved into the building now being vacated for the new location. "Bob" Covert bought the store and Mr. Covert bought the store and the popularity and good management of these two men have maintained the reputation of the institution, for "Eli's place" has always been a sort of an "institution" in Dixon.

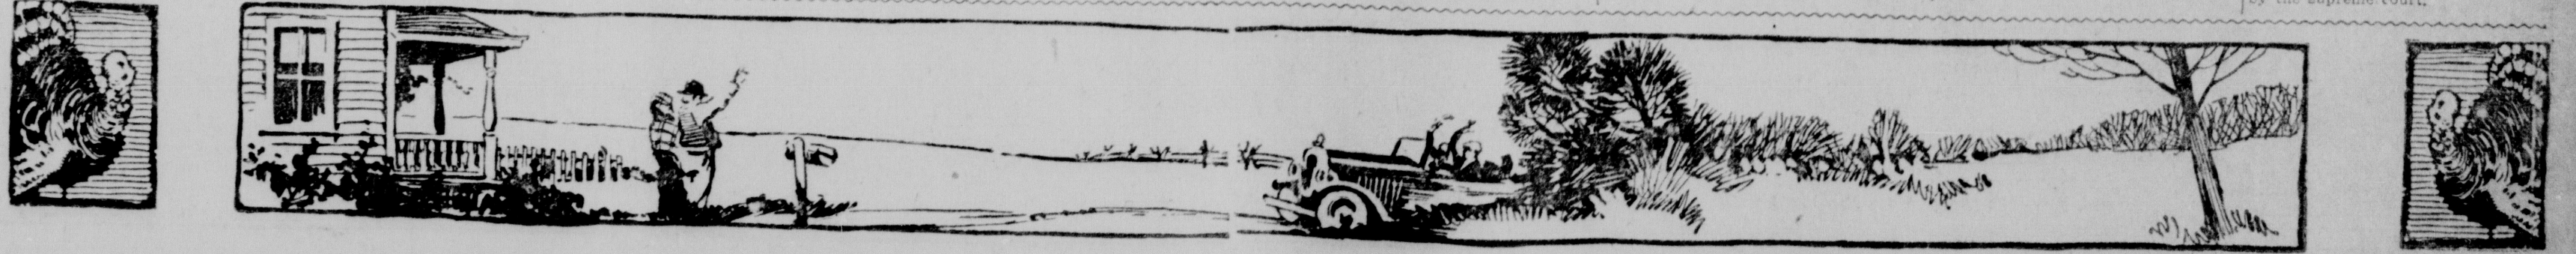

The many friends of "Bob" and "Bill" are pleased with their success and proud of their new store. May the Wooden Indian keep his remarkable good health and continue in the even tenor of his ways down through the ages. Some old folks don't like changes and of course he got quite used to standing in the one spot, but we feel sure he'll like the new one better.

Letter From Melius of Great Interest

The following letter from Luella Melius, the prima donna, who received such an ovation the past week in Chicago, in Grand Opera, to Mrs. Elus Shaw, will be of great interest to Dixonites, especially as Melius who has sung here, was a great friend of Orleana Newcomer. The letter follows:

Chicago, Nov. 22, 1925.

Dear Mrs. Shaw:

You will excuse me I know for not replying sooner to your lovely note of the 16th, but since the sensational success which I was so fortunate to have, I am actually "snowed under" with telegrams and correspondence. Then as I am singing "Traviata" this Saturday night I am so busy that I am only to pick out a few letters to reply to at this time.

The death of Orleana, coming within a week after the death of my mother (whose illness brought me over here) was such a terrible shock that I cannot bring myself to believe that it is true.

She was in splendid health when I left her in Milan only a few weeks ago, in fact she went with me to the train and hoped with me that I would find my mother so much improved that I would soon be back. She had made splendid progress in her vocal work—she had learned the French language quite well and I had placed her with Jean de Reszke. After his sudden death in April I took her to Milan and placed her with a splendid Italian Maestro who took a great interest in her and we planned that within six months I would have her appear in an opera with me, even though it might be a small part, so you see it has been almost like losing a sister.

Evidently her heart was not strong, although I have never heard her once complain of any illness, but as they advise me that she collapsed in her bathroom and was dead before anyone could reach her, it must have been her heart.

It is really quite terrible—she was only 24 and was just sort of blossoming out as I had taken her almost everywhere during the year that she was with me in Europe, and she seemed so very happy at meeting through me the various titled people and musicians that one in the musical world of Europe meets. She would always record immediately in her diary meeting the President of France, Felix Weingartner of the Vienna opera, the Duke of Connaught, the King of Spain and in fact nearly everyone as they come to the Riviera during the Monte Carlo opera season where I was singing. I shall feel her loss very keenly, especially when I return to Europe and I know that there will be many in Dixon who will miss her. I was glad indeed to receive your letter and to learn that I also had not been forgotten. Sincerely yours,

Luella Melius.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—

Oranges, cereal, thin cream, creamed fresh beef on toast, whole wheat toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—

Baked cheese sandwiches, head lettuce salad, jellied prunes, crisp cookies, milk, tea.

Dinner—

Stewed chicken, gravy, noodles, baked squash, jellied cabbage salad, canned peaches, sponge cake, rye bread, milk, coffee.

No potatoes are suggested in this menu as the noodles supply the starch. Noodles do not furnish the mineral salts found in potatoes so a salad particularly rich in these nutrients is planned.

Baked Cheese Sandwiches.

Eight slices bread, 1 1/2 pound cheese, 2 cups milk, 3 tablespoons butter, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon mustard, 1/2 teaspoon paprika.

Cut cheese in thin slices. Butter bread lightly and make sandwiches filled with cheese. Arrange in a shallow making dish. Beat eggs slightly, add milk and seasonings and pour over sandwiches. Bake in a moderate oven until a golden brown. Serve at once.

Pickles should be served with this dish if planned for grown persons. (Copyright, 1925, N.E.A. Service, Inc.)

BY CYNTHIA GREY—

We all are looking for short cuts to success. Here is Noel Coward's recipe:

"Lock your workroom door on the inside and slave."

Coward is very much of a lion in New York City. He has two plays on Broadway, one of which, "The Vortex," is an outstanding hit. Others are in the course of rehearsal.

He's just 25 years old and a conspicuous success. All the producers want to produce his plays. All the actors and actresses want to act in them. All the smart people want to entertain him and call him by his first name.

Everything is fine. He can pick and choose. But five years ago, no one knew anything about him. That, of course, was back in the days when he had his door locked on the inside and was plugging away on the very plays that now are so much in demand.

An Unknown.

People weren't flooding him with invitations in those days. Money wasn't so plentiful then. None schemed to meet him or print his opinion on everything from beautiful women to the national war debt. He didn't matter to anyone but himself and a small circle of unimportant people. So he had time to work. What is more unusual, he did.

Many people will tell you today that the secret of success is to know the right people. If you just play around long enough with the intelligentsia, you will, by some process of absorption, become a famous artist, writer, or what not.

Get introduced to the moneyed men of Wall Street and you'll soon pick up enough tips so that all you need to do is to clip your coupons.

I know many families who strain the family income to keep their sons at expensive Eastern schools just so they can meet the sons of wealthy men, who can help them later in business.

"You've got to know the right people," practically has become our national slogan.

All this, of course, is because we want to get along the easiest way—to cash in on someone else's hard work if we can. Very few of us actually want success so much as the cantages success brings, and if we can get the results without hard labor, we aren't going to insist on the hard knocks.

Shortsighted.

It doesn't require any keen analytical mind to see the shortsightedness of this course.

The way to make a hit is to have something most other people haven't, but that they would like to have. If you have superlative social graces, you will always be in demand at parties. If you can write fine books or plays, or paint gloriously, or make of yourself a personality that is unique or unusual enough to command attention, you will force people to recognize you. You will not have any trouble knowing the right people, for they will seek you out.

The surest plan is to do your work first, and get your recognition later. If you could get the recognition without doing the work, the odds are against the work ever materializing.

THANKS GIVING

by Hal Cochran

BE honest and fair, and consider a bit
The good that you get out of living.
The world, after all, you will have to admit
Returns to you more than you're giving.
At times you have drunk from the cup of good cheer,
A ready and willing partaker.
Is it asking too much that you stop, once a year,
And give up real thanks to your Maker?

YOU learn, as you live, that your happiness share
Is oft interrupted by sorrow.
But cloudiness clears and the outlook is fair,
Through the sunshine that comes on the morrow.
Whatever your lot, life's the best thing you've got,
And, all in all, well worth the living.
Consider! You'll see that you've reason to be Sincere in the thanks that you're giving.

LET US GIVE THANKS!

"Some hae meat and canna eat,
And some would eat that want it;
But we hae meat, and we can eat
Sae let the Lord be thank it!"

THUS wrote the illustrious poet Robert Burns. And as another Thanksgiving Day draws nigh, we can't help but recall that simple verse of four lines. What a wonderful bit of Truth in it! The picture it paints befits us all—no matter what station in life we hold—no matter whether our home be a humble abode or a mirrored palace.

We HAVE much to be thankful for! Prosperity has wielded its magic wand o'er our great land. It has brought the light of happiness into every home. Perhaps, not as much in some as in others—but all, in some measure, have been benefited by its blessings.

Yes, we know not what it is to come away from a table hungry and let's hope we never do. Nature has again blessed us with a bountiful Harvest and our markets are flooded with the necessities that sustain life. We have but to ask and it is given us with plentiful hand.

Each day the sun seems to shine a little brighter for us. And through its beams we see no dark clouds on the horizon. Our future seems assured—yes, looking more promising of Happiness and Success than ever.

So as we once again gather 'round the festive board on Thanksgiving Day—let's not forget to take the poet's advice and

"Gae Thanks Unto The Lord!"

FINDING ROMANCE.

A middle-aged Los Angeles bookkeeper recently built himself a sturdy sailboat, studied navigation and seamanship in his spare moments and put off for a voyage around the world—a trip, one is happy to read, that came to a successful conclusion.

What was he after—this middle-aged man of ledgers and card indexes? Perhaps he got too tired of dusty files and scratching pens. Perhaps the long-dormant instinct bequeathed him by some old sea-roving ancestor stirred and asserted its right to be heard. Or, perhaps, he simply succumbed to that most ancient and wistful of human longings—the desire to see what is on the other side of the hill.

It would be interesting to know if he found his goal. Did romance keep drifting on before him, always just out of reach behind the blue horizon? Or did he run it down under the clear skies of the South Seas, track it to its lair in the fresh gales off the Cape of Good Hope, make it his own among the gold-fringed islands of the Caribbean?

Probably he failed to find it. Romance is a strange thing. You can miss it at Bangkok or Port of Spain, and you can discover it, most unexpectedly, in the street behind your own house. He who looks for it seems fated to lose it, and the men who have it seldom realize it.

For it is one of the tragedies of our life that romance is never what we ourselves are doing. Witness the aviator who complains of boredom, the newspaper reporter who sighs against the monotony of his calling, the sea captain who dreams of ending his days on a farm far from blue water.

But if romance is impossible of actual attainment, the urge to seek it is grounded deep in the human heart. It makes poets of some men, artists of others, Amundsen and Peary of others, Chapmans and Dr. Cooks of still others. It never lets us rest.

And, after all, isn't it just as well? Our strivings and strugglings for a better tomorrow, for a world of peace and happiness and contentment—what are they but thinly-disguised yearnings for romance? Those glimpses of dazzling white cities that will some day replace the grimy, soot-blackened towns we now live in, that will house no hungry children or discouraged men and women—they sustain and inspire us, and the resolve to live so that they may some day be realities is the very essence of the romantic urge.

We can't ever reach the romantic seas of our dreams. But if we are true and honest and courageous, we can hear, dimly but surely, faint echoes of the distant music that will rise from the land that America is to be, and we may snatch a moment's vision of the peace and freedom that lie in store, we hope, for our children's children.

And that is our romance.

POPULAR.

The man was rather apologetic as he went to the clerk in the hightoned book store and insisted that he wanted a good mystery story—preferably one dealing with the doings of some super-detective.

Apparently he had the idea that it was distinctly "low brow" to read a mystery story. A lot of people think so.

But oddly enough, some of the world's greatest men liked nothing better than a mystery story for their idle hours. President Wilson read them avidly; Lloyd George has a long shelf full of them; you will see them in a bishop's study and in a steel king's library.

If you like to read them, you can console yourself by the thought that you're in good company.

BE SCEPTICAL.

The confirmed cynic is a nuisance. Yet one can't help wishing that more of our fellow-citizens were cynical as far as news stories about moving picture actors and actresses were concerned.

It's almost a safe bet to say that two-thirds of all the stories you see about them are press-agent yarns. The ingenuity of the press agent knows no bounds, and often the lack of breeding of his employers permits him to capitalize even such things as domestic differences.

Don't get too excited about the stories about movie people. All the press agents are really trying to do is force their names on your attention.

A BIGGER PARK.

It is proposed to add 300,000 acres of land to Yellowstone National Park. This would put the great Teton range of mountains, finest of Wyoming's scenic attractions, within the protection of the federal government.

Congress ought to ratify this move without delay. By all means, let us add all we can to our great national playgrounds. The beauties of Yellowstone are free to all of us; extend the park and you extend each citizen's own vacation ground.

A RELIEF.

It is very gratifying to read Mrs. Zachary Lansdowne's prompt denial of reports that she was to go on the stage.

The widow of the Shenandoah's commander won the country's respect and regard by her dignified, quiet course since the tragedy. Going on the stage now would inevitably cause her to forfeit most of it.

She has impressed her fellow citizens as a thoroughbred. Let us hope we can retain that impression.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

The painting before which they stopped now was marked plainly, "No. 461—The Hunt."

Nancy and Nick put on their own clothes again, and following Mister Blue Cap, they left the church where the wedding had been. That is, they left the picture—for church, flowers and people had again turned into a large painting in a heavy gold frame. "I liked that adventure," said Nancy to the little fairman. "It was great fun being flower girl and wearing such a lovely pink dress and scattering rose-leaves before the bride. I like Picture Land, Mister Blue Cap."

"So do I," agreed Nick. "It was fun being a page and wearing a white satin suit and carrying a ring on a pillow. What are we going to do next?"

Mister Blue Cap stopped before another large painting in the picture gallery. Mrs. Walton had not come back and the picture gallery was empty.

The painting before which they stopped now was marked plainly "Number 461—The Hunt." And the name of the artist was underneath. But that didn't matter.

"Here we are," said Mister Blue Cap, running up the magic steps that suddenly appeared below the heavy gold frame of the picture.

And so it appeared: They certainly were there, and all the gentlemen and ladies in the picture saw them and came riding to the front of the picture on their hunting horses, and beckoned with their whips. Mister Blue Cap unlocked the glass door which swung out as the others had done, and motioned for the Twins to follow.

"Hello here!" said one of the men. "Where did you come from?"

"From the picture gallery," said Nick looking back over his shoulder. But to his surprise there was no such thing to be seen. Only lovely country on all sides, and horses and dogs and ladies and gentlemen—the gentlemen in very red coats and high hats.

"From where?" cried the man in surprise. "Oh—nowhere!" said Nick hastily. "What nice looking youngsters!" said another man kindly.

"Yes, aren't they dear?" said one of the ladies. "How do you do, children?" and she reached down from her horse and shook hands cordially with them both.

"They didn't say much about Mister Blue Cap. Indeed, they didn't seem to notice him. Perhaps they thought he was one of the dog-keepers, or one of the grooms, or one of the whippers-in—or something such."

The dogs kept barking, and the horses kept pawing around and whinnying and there was a great deal of excitement.

"What—what is it all about?" shouted Nick as loudly as he could to the first man who had spoken. "We're riding to the hounds," shouted the man above the din. "We are going on a fox hunt. Do you and your sister want to come along?"

"Oh, yes!" cried Nick quickly, but Nancy said, "I can't ride, sir! I'd fall off."

"Oh, no you won't," said the man kindly. "I have two wonderful little ponies. Dubbins, go and saddle Nibbs and Scott. The youngsters are going after the fox, too!"

The Twins were very much excited when Dubbins, the groom, went away and came back shortly leading two of the smartest black ponies they had ever seen.

Their bridles and saddles were made of bright shining leather which gleamed like gold against their satiny black coats.

"And see here, Dubbins," said the kind hunter who had ordered the ponies for them. "Take these children into the lodge there and give them some hunting clothes. There is a girl's riding habit and some for the boy, too—a read coat and stiff derby hat and boots for both."

Dubbins went away followed by the Twins, while the hunter held the ponies' reins.

Soon they all came back and Dubbins helped the children to mount. Nancy on Nibbs and Nick on Scott, and a finer pair you never saw. Even Nancy had a little hard hat, like the ladies wore, and a black riding habit with a skirt, mind you, and instead of riding cross-saddle like boys do—and a lot of ladies, too, nowadays—she rode sitting sideways with her knee braced against a funny stick up place on the saddle.

Nick looked grand in his scarlet coat, tight trousers and shiny boots. Suddenly a horn sounded some where. The dogs barked more loudly than ever and everybody began to ride toward the gate where the fox-hunt was to start.

"Where shall we go?" Nancy asked the man who had attended to everything.

"Just follow the crowd," said the man. "You need not ride fast if you don't wish to. Your ponies are very gentle—they will take you safely across fences and ditches and streams of water without jolting you in the least. Don't be afraid."

The gate was opened and away went the dogs with a bound.

And the horses seemed fairly to leap through the air after them, so anxious were they to be gone.

Nibbs and Scott went after them like the wind, but so easily did the ponies move, that it was no trick at all for the Twins to stay on. Never had they dreamed there could be such ponies. It was like riding the rocking-horse on a merry go round.

But, of course, horses can go faster than ponies, and after a bit the Twins were far behind. They could still hear the baying of the dogs and the shouts of the hunters, but they seemed to be alone.

"Say, Nancy," said Nick suddenly. "Do you know what all this is about? They are after one poor little fox! I could see him first, I'd hide him so the dogs couldn't get him."

That gave Nancy an idea. "Let's try," she said. "Look there! They're all coming back. The fox must be coming this way."

And then, what do you think? Mister Blue Cap spoke up. He had been hiding under Nick's long coat tails all the time.

"I heartily agree with you, children," said he. "We must save the poor fox if we can."

THE TANGLE

LETTER FROM JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT TO SYDNEY CARTON—CONTINUED

Day before yesterday morning, Syd, the monkeys of the company who are going to make the picture, "Hot Steel," arrived in the city. In the afternoon, Paula, her leading man who takes the part of a soaking pit superintendent, made a visit to the mill, to see how things could be done in the picture.

After quite a talk in the office, Paula's director, camera man and assistant director went to another part of the mill where some other shots were to be taken. I took Miss Perier and her leading man over to the soaking pits where it had been decided that the big dramatic climax was to be played.

Syd, you have met Potts, the superintendent of the soaking pit at our mills. You know what a great big, splendid chap he is and of course you are aware that he knows his job from the ground up as he was with Leslie's father for a number of years before I took the plant over. We have been on the verge of a strike for the last three or four months. A lot of workmen have become imbued with a great many socialistic ideas and they are putting forth propaganda which is almost anarchistic in its intent.

We have been having a great deal of trouble among the men. Mr. Potts, of course, has no sympathy with them at all, rightly deciding that the man who does his work conscientiously will get a fair deal in our plant and that's all there is to it.

The night that Paula came, Potts, who had heard that the men were holding meetings on the street corner, went down around the bend and there he came upon a man who has charge of the ingot crane, standing on a soap box and haranguing the crowd on the wrongs of the proletariat and the way honest working men in our mills, under the heel of the great trusts, are crushed and exploited.

The whole thing, superintendent Potts told me yesterday morning, was virtually a call to strike and, after listening a while, he became rather worried over the outcome.

"The men were getting more and more excited," said Potts, "and I thought it was time for me to interfere, so I walked up to Kenke and asked him if he didn't have charge of the ingot crane at the mills."

"He said 'yes.' " "I asked him if he wasn't satisfied with his job and he answered: "None of your damn business, and you get to hell out of here right away if you don't want to get hurt!" "I knew Mr. Prescott, it was up to me then and there to settle things. If I showed the white feather I would have no control over those men again, so I just hauled off and hit him one and he passed out for about five minutes."

"One of the men told me that it took him quite a while to come to, for I walked out, paying no more attention to anyone. The minute he could speak however, he began to make his threats, telling them all he would do to me and do me right."

When our soaking pit superintendent told me this, I warned him to be careful and I said to him that it would be very easy for the man to pull the crane over a little too far and drop an ingot of hot steel on the head of the man below.

"You'd never know what hurt you, Potts," I told him.

"He'll never do that to me," said the superintendent laughing. "He's too big a coward. They take it all out in talking."

I really thought no more about it, for I knew the men in the mill from highest to lowest took all sorts of chances every day.

Well, Syd, this afternoon Paula came in and asked me to take her over to the soaking pit. With her leading man, we went toward them. I was explaining everything to them. As we came to the pits I introduced Mr. Potts to Miss Perier and Stanley, her leading man.

"You've come just at the right time," said Mr. Potts, as the noise of the ingot starting, came to his ears. The man up above only heard his enemy speak. He did not see that anyone was with him. He had probably planned this very thing. With a snarl, he loosened the clamps and the ingot began to sag. Now, what happened seemed too wonderful for words and it happened in less time than it would take you to read any two lines in this letter.

To understand it you must know that I was right directly under the ingot. Beside me was Paula. Directly behind was Potts and Stanley. Just why, I do not know, but I think it was a direct interposition of Providence that made Paula Perier took up. She instantly saw what the man at the crane was trying to do and leaped across with a cry to pull me out of danger.

The superintendent naturally, being a man of quick decision, reached out that instant and pulled Miss Perier back just as the ingot dropped and made a great hole in the earth below. I was of course nearest it and it was near enough to me to set my trousers afire. I've got a blister down to whole side of my leg, Syd. (Copyright, 1925, NEA Service, Inc.)

OUR BOARDING HOUSE

BY AHRENS

Did You Ever Stop to Think—

BY E. R. Waite, Secretary, Shawnee, Okla. Board of Commerce

E. J. PEARSON, PRESIDENT OF THE NEW YORK, NEW HAVEN & HARTFORD RAILROAD COMPANY, SAYS:

That railroads are transportation manufacturers and merchants. They manufacture and sell one commodity, Transportation, divided into two main divisions, freight and passenger; and just as any other manufacturers, their chief problem is to manufacture their commodity at the lowest price possible and yet turn out a product which measures up to the quality desired by the purchasers.

That there is one vital difference between Transportation Merchandisers and others. This difference is that other manufacturers are free to change their prices at will to meet changes in cost of production. The price of the Railroad's commodity, on the other hand, is under the jurisdiction of public regulatory bodies.

For this reason it often happens that railroads suffer, because when costs mount, rates are usually very slow to follow; yet the tendency is for them to follow much more quickly a downward trend of prices.

THAT as a matter of fact, SERVICE is a very much more important factor in transportation than rates—more important to the public because primarily the public wants good service, must have service in the full volume required, and is willing fundamentally, to pay a fair price for it.

TRANSPORTATION IS AT PRESENT UNDERGOING SOMETHING OF A REVOLUTION—OR RATHER AN EVOLUTION. THERE IS A TRANSITION FROM HARD-AND-FAST RAIL OPERATION TO MORE ELASTIC MOTOR VEHICLE OPERATION FOR SOME CLASSES OF TRANSPORTATION.

PLAINLY THERE IS A FIELD FOR BOTTLING YET THERE IS A LINE OF DEMARCATION WHERE ONE FORM OF TRANSPORTATION CEASES TO BE ECONOMICALLY SOUND, WHERE THE OTHER SHOULD PREVAIL, BUT THE DIVIDING LINE IS SOMETHING WHICH CAN ONLY BE WORKED OUT WITH FULL REGARD TO THE BASIS OF COSTS NECESSARILY AFFECTING THE RAILROADS, AND THE AVOIDANCE OF WHAT MIGHT BE TERMED A SUBSIDY IN FAVOR OF THE INEXPENSIVE USE OF THE HIGHWAYS.

TOUCHDOWNS FOR GYROS, KIWANIS, COACHES, ORDER

Champions to be Imbued
With Fine Spirit
for Sterling

A touchdown for the Gyro club, an other for the Kiwanis club, and one for the coaches, were the orders that Captain Gus Bondi of the Dixon high school football squad had received up until noon today. These are expected to be delivered tomorrow afternoon at the north side athletic field when the Rock River Valley conference champions of this city meet their rivals, the Sterling high in their annual post season game.

President Oliver M. Rogers of the Kiwanis club placed his order at the regular weekly luncheon yesterday noon when the squad and coaches were guests at a luncheon honoring the champs. Winston "Wink" McReynolds proved the entertainer of the squad and with the assistance of Paul Bruckner, Jr., at the piano, gave a solo dance number which was enthusiastically encored. The team and its cheer leaders along with the meeting was a noisy one for a time as the team yelled out cheers for the Kiwanis club and the Kiwanians replied with lusty cheers for the team. Ray S. Kilne and W. D. Hart gave to very well rendered vocal selections.

To Attend Pep Meeting.
As many of the Kiwanians as can be present, were ordered to report at the high school auditorium this evening at 7:15 to participate in the final "pep" session of the year. The luncheon clubs who have dined the champions will be present in large numbers and short talks will be given by the officers.

Sheriff Elliott C. Risley at the request of the high school athletic association, has furnished several deputies who will keep the crowds back of the fences at the athletic field tomorrow afternoon and state motorcycle officers will direct traffic at both entrances to the field. The game will start promptly at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon.

The coaches of the Sterling and Dixon high schools late yesterday agreed on the officials who will officiate at the annual post season battle tomorrow afternoon. Farr of DeKalb will referee the contest, Robb of Princeton serving as umpire and Carlson of Davenport as head linesman.

N. W. Conceded "Big Ten" Title to Mich.

Chicago, Nov. 25—(AP)—Northwestern's conceding of the Big Ten title to Michigan has settled the chief western conference football championship. Any claim Notre Dame has to a western championship is at stake in its meeting of Nebraska at Lincoln tomorrow. The Army is the only team to hold a win over the Rockemen. Nebraska, in fighting trim, hopes to make good Rocke's prophecy that his team would be beaten twice.

The Missouri Valley Conference winds up its season with the Kansas Aggies—Lowa. State clash at Ames and the Grinnell-Washington meeting in St. Louis.

Title chances are involved in the Western interstate conference games of DePaul and St. Viators in Chicago and Luther-Columbia at Dubuque.

The service eleven championship of the Sixth Army Corps Area is the stake in the meeting Saturday in St. Louis of Fort Sheridan and Jefferson Barracks.

Elgin Academy Meets Culver, Ind., Eleven

Chicago Star Back is

Game

Chicago, Nov. 25—(AP)—Further inroads into the ranks of college football players may be made by professional football which now boasts Harold "Red" Grange.

Austin "Five yards" McCarty, who is to the University of Chicago what Grange was to Illinois, has been made an offer to play against the former Illinois flash at Coral Gables, Florida, Christmas day the Herald and Examiner says.

"Not entirely opposed to it," is his quoted response to news that efforts are being made to sign him for the game, together with Benny Friedman, Michigan's captain-elect and Nick Kutsch of Iowa.

The newspapers say efforts to sign them are being made by J. W. Doherty of New York. The team would oppose Grange's and would be captained by Tim Callahan, former Yale captain and All-American. No player would receive payment for his service unless he desired it.

McCarty would not discuss the question of his willingness to forsake his amateur status. He is a star basketball player and figured as a sure regular on the Maroon team this year.

CORN GROWERS TO LOSE MONEY THEY TELL GOVERNMENT

Seek Means to Make Record Crop Profitable to Them

Chicago, Nov. 25—(AP)—The bread basket section of the country has a grudge. It stands to lose money on one of the largest crop crops ever raised.

So yesterday, a group of bankers, business men and government officials met in Washington with Secretary Jardine to discuss a means of aiding Iowa farmers, at least, in marketing their corn to better advantage.

What other industry, the farmers inquire, could stand a loss of over $400,000,000 which faces the farmers on the basis of present prices. When crops are short, the farmer frequently makes money. When crops break records he frequently loses, as the producer has no control over the laws of nature.

The nine principal corn states show gains over last year except South Dakota, while in Ohio the crop is nearly double that of last year and the greatest in history. The Ohio average of 48 bushels per acre is the highest in the Midwest.

To Get Less Than 24.
Iowa, the principal corn state, has a tremendous crop—175,000,000 bushels more than last year. Yet the Iowa farm bureau says the farmers will not receive as much for it as they did for last season's short crop.

Illinois, second in corn production, will receive $60,000,000 less than last year for its 394,000,000 bushels, says the Illinois Agricultural Association.

In many sections excess moisture acquired during the late fall has operated to depress the farm price of corn while lack of an adequate credit system, according to some agricultural authorities, hinders the farmer in holding his corn for better prices.

"Farmers of Illinois are not so much interested in devices to make more credit available to enable them to hold their corn," the Illinois Agricultural Association says, "as they are in some means to handle the surplus that follows a normal crop, to prevent it from breaking down prices disastrously."

In the last three-billion-bushel year, 1923, the farmers received $2,217,229,000 for their corn, but in 1924, for a crop six hundred million bushels less, the corn income of the country was two hundred million dollars greater.

The 1923 crop was 3,653,557,000 and brought an average of 72 cents a bushel. The 1925 crop, according to Nov. 1 estimates of the Department of Agriculture will total 3,013,000,000 bushels on which the farm price now averages around 55 cents.

LEGISLATION TO COMPLETE WATERWAYS IS PLANNED

Congressmen Announce Their Stand at Convention

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 25—(AP)—As an aftermath of the meeting of the Mississippi Valley Association, the inland waterway corporation, composed of one army officer and five civilians, serving without pay, will meet here today to receive suggestions as to the betterment of transportation along inland waterways of the central west.

Delegations from Helena, Ark., Baton Rouge, La., and St. Paul and Minneapolis, will present propositions to this body.

The men from Minnesota will suggest that the government establish a large line between St. Paul, Minneapolis and St. Louis; and if they fail to obtain this concession, will ask if the government will agree to take over a large line operated by private enterprise.

The Helena and Baton Rouge delegations will discuss terminals with the corporation.

Members of the Inland Waterway Corporation are: Brig. Gen. T. Q. Ashburn, chairman of the board; H. W. Seaman, Clinton, Iowa; M. J. Sanders, New Orleans; W. H. Jacoby, Pittsburgh; J. E. Smith, St. Louis and W. A. Brown, Birmingham.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 24—(AP)—Legislation that would make possible the completion of all inland waterway improvement projects was advocated by Congressmen at the meeting of the Mississippi Valley Association here today.

The Porter bill, introduced into the last congress by Representative S. G. Porter of Pittsburgh, that would appropriate $264,000,000 to furnish the funds necessary to complete river and harbor projects that have been approved by the War Department engineers, was explained. Mr. Porter said that less than one-fourth of the total investment in these improvements is now needed to complete them, and thereby protect and make productive the existing three-fourths.

"It is safe to follow the policies of Theodore Roosevelt and Abraham Lincoln," Congressman Porter said. "I had the Roosevelt policy in mind when I introduced the bill authorizing the $264,000,000 bond issue. I introduced it at the last session in order that it might be fully discussed and its merits established before being called up for a hearing."

Piecemeal Appropriations
"Major General L. H. Beach, former chief of engineers of the U. S. Army, on June 18 last, stated that it would probably take to the year 3,000 to complete waterway improvements if the present system of piecemeal appropriation is considered. Therefore, we are pleading with the federal government to adopt a businesslike method to prompt canalizing of the greatest inland waterway in the world. Under the present system of appropriation for them, nobody knows how long it will take to complete these water projects, and delay in improvements is a loss every year in wealth amounting to more than would be required for improvement of the whole system of waterways."

The congressman stated there was no question in the minds of any one of the feasibility to proper coordination of railroads, waterways and highways.

"The average rail rate throughout the United States last year was 10.78 mills per ton mile, while the federal barge line, operating on the Mississippi river carried freight last year for 31.2 mills per ton mile and earned a profit for the government."

"We often hear doubt expressed as to the possible use of the waterways will be put to it if they are sufficiently improved to permit dependable and economical navigation. The answer to this is that in 1923, the Monongahela river alone handled only about 1,600,000 tons less than the Panama Canal and 783,000 tons more than the Suez Canal. The strongest argument in favor of the immediate development of waterways for transportation purposes is found in the present activities on them."

Would Save Millions.
Congressman Porter stated that if

HE'S THANKFUL—FOR HAPPINESS, SUCCESS FOUND BEHIND STREET SWEEPER'S BROOM

By NEA Service

Cleveland, O.—When you can look back at a life of 71 years spent in honest and useful endeavor—

When you can consider the world about you, at that age, with the consciousness that through you have given freely you have received freely, as well—

And when you can gather a family of eight fine sons and daughters about you for a holiday dinner in your own home—

Well, under such circumstances, Thanksgiving Day means something to you.

And that is just why this Thanksgiving Day is a day of contentment and pride to Dominick Novario, 71, who is employed by the city of Cleveland as a street cleaner.

Happy in His Work.

Novario has been a street cleaner for many years. He has done his work faithfully and well, and he knows it. His life, as he sees it, has been a success. He's happy in his work, and he doesn't owe anybody a cent. What more could a man ask?

Despite his 71 years, Novario is full of enthusiasm. You've heard of bankers or business executives who keep on working after they might retire simply because they can't be idle. Well, Novario must be of the same strain.

The street cleaning gang reports for work at 6:30 every morning—all but Novario. He gets there half an hour earlier, even though he can't quit until the rest do at 3:30 p. m.

"I get down early so that I can get the gutters near the curbs cleaned before the automobiles begin to park," he explains.

Does Job Carefully.

His stretch of pavement is near the city hall. He tells with pride how he always runs his steel broom around every lamp post, to get the stray cigar stubs and bits of paper that hide there. And at intersections there's a way of ridding the corner with short, curved strokes that the beginner doesn't know and that can't be learned overnight. A whole lot depends on how a chap takes care of his broom, too. No one can do good work with a worn out or warped broom.

It's the little things that make the difference between an ordinary worker and a really good one, and Novario knows it.

His wife died 19 years ago and left him with six daughters and two sons to bring up. It made things a little bit hard, too. On winter days when he got home, there was no one to warm his slippers for him and laugh at his little anecdotes about the oddities of this or that business associate. And, once in a while, when he felt blue and wondered if he was really succeeding, there was no one to cheer him up and show confidence in his ability.

Educates Children.

But he carried on, and the children all grew up. "I guess it was a good job, raising them," says Novario with a pleasant smile.

his bill was passed by the next congress, it would save the tax payers millions of dollars, because the appropriations will be expended in five years and thereby save the tremendous interest on the moneys as well as eliminating the probability of the rivers washing the present improvements away.

Congressman Newton of St. Louis urged the association to do all in its power to influence the vote of congress toward legislation now pending in the national house.

"One of the difficulties which we encounter in congress is a selfish policy pursued by some members, some denounce river project appropriations as 'pork barrel proposition,' but I challenge any man to point to a single dollar of 'pork' in any river or harbor bill during the last seven years."

"Of the approximately $50,000,000 a year appropriated for river improvements, 90 percent of the effort is made by the friends of our inland river projects, but friends of our beautiful world with flowers in the florists' shops.

Don't kick your wife in the ribs as you crawl out of bed on Thanksgiving morning. Not that it would break a rib, but she might fracture her arm throwing a shoe at you. Then she couldn't cook.

Don't disagree with the cook on Thanksgiving morning. If you do her food is liable to disagree with you.

Nero fiddled around while Rome burned. What did he play? Why don't be silly. He played a fiddle. And if you make the cook mad on Thanksgiving morning she may fiddle around while dinner burns.

One time there was a man and he went back into the kitchen where the cook was cooking because cooks almost always cook in a kitchen. This cook didn't get paid for cooking in this kitchen. She was the man's wife. He said, "You can't make biscuits like my mother used to make."

She said, "You can't make money like my father used to make."

Didn't that dumbfuzzle him though? It happened one Thanksgiving. Hope it did, anyway.

Best way for a man to help his wife cook is to go into the front part of the house and smoke a cigar until she calls him.

While smoking his cigar he should be very careful not to go to the door and look for the Sunday paper. Simply because he might be absent-minded and decide to wait for it. When it arrives three days later he will be worn out.

So remember, Thanksgiving may seem like Sunday to you, but don't hunt the Sunday paper.

It is best to be about a medium sized person on Thanksgiving. Don't be too fat. All the fat people are reducing. They will eat too much turkey and stretch out on their backs, but they will not be comfortable. Even if their stomachs don't hurt them their old consciences will growl.

Don't be too thin on Thanksgiving. Even if a thin person's conscience doesn't hurt after eating too much, his stomach will.

On second, third, fifth and ninth thought, perhaps the above is an error. Maybe you shouldn't be a medium sized person. If so, you will eat too much and then your conscience and stomach both howl.

Don't try to keep from taking a nap after dinner. Better plan to give in. Write the doctor's number on the wall beside your phone in large numerals so the children may read as they run.

You have no idea how extremely important this is. The kids may call the undertaker by mistake. And the undertaker may come out and bury you before you have a chance to explain.

One Thanksgiving Day a man ate a big dinner and got flat on his back and first thing you know he was dreaming. He thought his wife took his last dime and blew it in for a loaf of bread when there wasn't a chew of tobacco in the house.

He broke out in a cold sweat and screamed. Neighbors rushed in. They calmed him. He learned his wife had done no such thing. She had only run away with the butcher.

So there is no use of trying to keep from dreaming on Thanksgiving. Now, about the things you should do, they, of course, are just opposite to the things you shouldn't do.

As you walk about or loaf around during the day stop now and then as well as here and there and think of something for which you are thankful.

Right away you can be thankful it is Thanksgiving Day instead of Christmas. If it were Christmas that would make two of them this year, and all the bills for last year's Christmas not paid yet.

Be thankful it isn't the Fourth of July. If it were, you might be going on a picnic. So be thankful it isn't the Fourth.

The things for which to be thankful might be placed in two groups, one for each class of people, men and women.

Men can be thankful they don't have to marry someone with whiskers, like women do. A man's wife's face may be dirty, awfully dirty, and still it won't scratch.

Perhaps there are five good, firm, real solid reasons why men should be thankful this Thanksgiving. Perhaps there are 10. Who knows? Maybe there are the same number for women. Let's see:

1. He can walk along the street and if he hears somebody cussing about something he can figure maybe something needs cussing about. He doesn't have to get insulted at what somebody else thinks about something else.

2. He can have a shiny nose and yet be happy.

3. He doesn't have to run to the front window to see if the man rinking the bell across the street is a bill collector or a sheriff. He knows from personal experience the chances are it is both.

4. He can blame his wife because the darn kids kick up more racket than a tribe of Indians, and why doesn't she quit crying and do something about it?

5. A man can sit down in a chair and prop his feet up on anything as high up as they will prop and will soon know he is alive through orders from the kitchen.

6. He can spend the insurance money and let his wife tell the collector to come back next week.

7. He never has to decide if his hair should be bobbed or long.

8. He can grow old without considering it a very serious crime.

9. He can smoke a pipe if it will stay lit.

There are nine reasons why men should be thankful Thanksgiving.

Women should be thankful just because.

1. Just because.

There are nine million reasons why women should be thankful Thanksgiving Day.

I was tired and worn out and my kidneys acted irregularly. A friend recommended Doan's Pills so I used some getting them at the Sullivan Drug Store. They rid me of the trouble."

Quit Coal and Use Coke

No Dust, Smoke, Dangerous Cases. No Soot in Chimneys to Burn and Set Fire to the Home.

When people generally learn how clean and safe and economical it is to burn coke instead of coal, they will never go back to coal for fuel, and we will have cleaner cities.

Firemen and Insurance Companies insist that a very large percentage of home destroying fires are caused by soft coal soot settling fire from a burning chimney or sparks on the roof.

Coke does not make any smoke, dirt, soot or gas when burned in a furnace. The proper way to burn coke is simple and is fully explained in a pamphlet just issued by the Indiana Coke & Gas Company, Terre Haute, Indiana. It is sent free on request to any household, and tells how to reduce fuel bills at least 25%.

"QUICK FIRE COKE" made by this company, is the highest quality of by-product coke, as it is produced with great care to produce a high-grade fuel from the coals best suited for this purpose.

Insist upon having "QUICK FIRE COKE." If your dealer does not supply you with "QUICK FIRE COKE" take no other, for none other is so good. Write us and we will tell you how to get the genuine and save money on your coal bills.

SYNOPSIS

Connemara Moore has just died off the deck of the yacht, joining Mc-Tish in the waters of Long Island Sound. There had been a terrible fight aboard, following talk of boot-leggers and revenue officers. Aunt Celimena, accompanied by Bing Carrington, Saltwater Adams and Brewster, the lawyer, is just leaving her Connecticut home—though it's after midnight—to search for Connie. The girl was to have announced her engagement tonight, but—disappeared.

"I've thought of the very thing," he announced triumphantly. "Harry Harvey's got a motor boat that will take us to Bayville in no time. Harry's in Saratoga, but his engineer knows me, and he lives in the boathouse down by the inlet. You're not to worry, Miss Moore," he repeated soothingly. The role of protecting and advising Aunt Celimena was so novel that Bing couldn't resist playing with it from time to time. He had always had an uneasy conviction that the indomitable old lady preferred Salt to himself as a future nephew-in-law, which naturally did nothing to detract from his enjoyment of the present situation.

A winding country lane led from the Boston Post Road to the particular little inlet from the Sound they were headed for, and at the end of this they found Harry Harvey's boathouse readily enough, but no engineer. The motorboat, a fairly large one, was locked into a slip over which the boathouse straddled.

The unforeseen absence of the engineer was disconcerting, but Bing was in a mood tonight to ride roughshod over obstacles, ethical or physical as the case might be, and he declared boldly that since there was no one to give permission, they must do without.

Mr. Brewster was inclined to demur at the forcible removal of another man's property, but his protests were swept aside without formality, and he found himself, somewhat to his own astonishment, following the resourceful Mr. Carrington, gingerly, through a broken window into the dark interior of the boathouse.

Salt and Aunt Celimena waited outside until the doors of the boathouse swung open, after which Bing once more disappeared into the darkness within, to loose the motor boat from its moorings.

The storm had blown over, but it was not until they were within sight of the Long Island shore that the moon broke through the clouds, conveniently in readiness to light their passage into Bayville.

Mr. Brewster pointed it out to Miss Celimena as complacently as though he, personally, were responsible for its reappearance.

"A good omen, my dear Miss Moore," he suggested, rubbing his thin hands ingratiatingly.

Miss Celimena ignored him. "What's that?" she demanded of no one in particular, lifting a hand for silence. Salt, who was near her, bent forward in a listening attitude.

The sound was repeated, and this time resolved itself into muffled shouting and a few straggling shots at what appeared to be no great distance from them; though, since the moon once more chose to retire behind the heavy wind clouds racing across the sky, it was impossible to see anything.

"Sounds as if rum runners were out tonight," Bing grunted. "Guess they're in a clash with some patrol boat."

Mr. Brewster was evidently of the same opinion, for he immediately began to urge Aunt Celimena to give up the expedition and order the Filomena's nose pointed back to Connecticut.

"My dear madam, there isn't the slightest need of your undertaking this wild-goose chase," he pleaded. "Let us go back, I beg of you, and these young men can—"

"Pish!" said Aunt Celimena with a brevity and decision that would have been crudeness in anyone less naturally majestic. Unfortunately the full effect of the retort was somewhat marred by her having risen to her feet to peer into the darkness ahead, just as a particularly playful wave hit the Filomena's bow. Aunt Celimena sat down a little hurriedly for either dignity or comfort, and panted, glaring about her.

Bing shut off the engine, and they floated for a time, listening for a repetition of the sound of firing, which did not come. Then the moon made one of its periodic reappearances and showed them a motorboat only a few hundred yards away. She had no lights, and the irregular put-put-put of her exhaust spoke of trouble. She was distinctly down by the bow, and even in the uncertainty of moonlight and shadow it took no expert to see that she had been badly stove in.

Evidently someone on board her caught sight of the Harvey boat at the same moment, for a vigorous hail came across the water, requesting the Filomena to stand by.

"I don't altogether like the look of this," Bing confided to Salt Adams under his breath, his face troubled. "But she's sinking, that's sure. We'll have to take 'em on board, whoever they are."

The other craft was heading directly for them now, laboring heavily, and Bing, leaving Salt to start their engine, went forward again to the wheel.

What happened next was as perplexing as it was unexpected. The navigator on the approaching boat suddenly put his helm hard over, so that the battered hewcomer lay full in the path of the Filomena.

Bing, with no time to consider, instinctively selected the side that seemed to offer the better chance of passing, and swung his own wheel. For a moment it looked as though he would get by, but hope was short-lived. The nose of the Filomena grazed, jarringly, along the other craft's side, and Bing found himself sprawling in the bilge.

Before he could disentangle himself from Aunt Celimena, who had clutched him with determination at the moment of impact, a man climbed agilely over the Filomena's rail and swung himself down on the deck. He was a big man in a wet and torn jersey, and as Bing struggled to his feet he had a glimpse over one shoulder of a section of pipe, wielded by one of the brawny arms the jersey covered, descending deliberately in the direction of his own unprotected head. He also saw, to his amazement, that five or six bulky figures had followed the first over the side, and appeared to be hitting senselessly and indiscriminately at anything they saw moving.

Then the moonlight was obscured abruptly for Bing Carrington in a shower of red and golden stars, and his feet slipping from under him, he shot head first over the Filomena's low rail.

The pipe welder had struck him a glancing blow, stunning him momentarily, but the plunge into the water revived him sufficiently to realize the advantages of the depths over the surface just then.

By the time bursting lungs had forced him to come up, he was fifty feet or more from the two boats and well in the shadow. A log was bobbing along in the path of the moonlight. Somebody on one of the boats caught sight of it, and immediately a revolver sang out several times, and two bullets splattered the water close to the log. The firer, however, discovering his mistake, desisted, and Bing, with cautious intervals of swimming under water, made his way to the near-by shore.

Behind him on the deck he had left so precipitately, pandemonium reigned for the space of a few long-drawn-out minutes, but at the end of that time the boarders, owing to the surprise of the attack and superior numbers, had things their own way, and proceeded to lay the two boats side by side.

Too Much Efficiency

By E. J. Rath

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN W. BROOKE, widower and hardware magnate, arranged with a firm of efficiency engineers to manage his home for two months while he is away. He fails to inform his three grown children, Constance, Billy and Alice. They learn of their father's arrangement, however, when H. HEDGE, efficiency engineer, takes control of the Brooke household. Constance, Billy and Alice, because he refuses to work and maintain Constance's home as he became his secretary. Alice drives an allowance because she is still attending school.

Constance and Billy are indignant because Constance has apparently gone over to the enemy. Constance, however, is not so sure. She is a mind-reader. Mr. Hedge prevented Constance from eloping with Tommy Treadwell. Today Hedge is accompanying Constance on a shopping expedition. They have just entered a shoe store. Constance has purchased several pairs of gloves which Hedge insists in charging contrary to all expressed rules of "efficient management."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

As they left the glove's and re-entered the car Constance was trying to get a grip on herself.

"Steady," she whispered to her beating heart. "This is only a little skirmish. It's not even an outpost taken. Don't be too sure."

"Where next?" he demanded.

Constance pursed her lips doubtfully and studied the extended tip of her shoe.

"Shoes?" he asked.

"How wonderful you are at guessing," she murmured. "Really, I need a pair of walking shoes."

H. Hedge left her in the shoe shop while he returned to the sidewalk and delivered a sharp lecture to Frank, the chauffeur, for allowing the motor to idle and thereby consume gasoline.

"It saves the starter, sir," explained Frank. "Using the starter runs out the batteries."

"Use the crank," advised the efficiency man. "It's good exercise."

Frank said that he would, but did not explain how he would most like to use it.

Back in the shop, he found Constance regarding three pairs of shoes with fond eyes.

"I don't know which to take," she said, looking up with a smile.

"Which are the walking shoes?" "That's the trouble. They all are."

He examined the shoes critically. "You do a good deal of walking," he observed at length. "I've noticed it."

"Yes," she admitted ruefully. "It's economy not to wear a single pair of shoes continuously," he added. "That has been demonstrated."

"I—I think I have heard that."

"Of course." Then to the clerk: "Wrap them all up."

Constance bent her head and began fishing in her purse with dutiful anxiety. She did not care to look up, fearing that the efficiency man might truly interpret the gleam in her eyes.

"And charge them," she heard him say in his usual gruff tones.

Back in the limousine, they rode in silence for several minutes, the ogre frowning at the bundles that lay on the seat in front of them. He had made another entry in the note-book.

Constance judged that it was time to test the defense again.

"I've already spent more than I've saved," she said sadly.

"The purchases are being charged," he reminded her, still glaring at the bundles.

"It's—it's very kind of you."

"Not at all. Understand, Miss Brooke, that economy and efficiency are not synonymous with a policy of never spending any money."

"Truly?" Her astonishment was by no means feigned.

"Of course. I thought you understood. There is a complete chapter on that feature in the book I loaned you."

"So there is. I'd forgotten."

"Necessary expenditures, in order to preserve efficiency, are always economy. You needed gloves and shoes, did you not?"

"Indeed, yes!"

"Very well. Then we have been practicing economy and living up to our principles. Economy, I may add, in mere dollars, frequently costs more than extravagance. Note the case of your New Year party."

"It would have been extravagance to pay two hundred dollars, say, for the employment of musicians and the purchase of indigestible refreshments. But it was economy, combined with efficiency and the principle of safety first, to spend three hundred dollars for a specialist and nurse in order to protect the health of the household."

Constance opened her eyes wide but was too amazed to speak. So he had spent three hundred dollars on when Constance next ventured a glance she detected a faint grin on the efficiency man's features. He froze it immediately when he discovered that she was observing him.

"Well, where next?" he repeated.

Constance decided upon another strategic move.

"Honestly, I don't know," she said. "What do you think I want—I mean need?"

He studied her until the scrutiny became a trifle embarrassing. There was a penetrating and inclusive quality in his survey that caused her to flush faintly. She wished H. Hedge was not quite so thorough in his examination, yet she was conscious that his painstaking interest was not displeasing.

"I think you need a set of furs," he said.

She beamed at him in sudden bewilderment. How could he possibly have guessed. How could he be so wonderfully human? And why—oh, why couldn't he always be like that?

"You are a mind-reader, Mr. Hedge," she affirmed. "You almost frightened me."

"No, I am not a mind-reader," said the efficiency man positively. "But you see, the other day I noticed that your muff and boa might easily, even profitably, be replaced with a set more in harmony with your fur coat."

"When in the world did you notice that?" she asked in surprise.

"On the back stairs."

Constance turned pink. It was the first time he had even alluded, in the most indirect manner, to the morning when he had robbed Tommy Treadwell of a bride. She herself had brought up the subject once, by mistake, but H. Hedge had never responded it.

"I did not know you were so observing," she said for the sake of speech.

"It is my business to observe. Where do you buy your furs?"

She gave a direction to the chauffeur and presently the efficiency man found himself in one of those Fifth Avenue shops that resemble nothing so much as a palatial private home.

Half an hour later, truly dazed, Constance emerged with a silver fox skin around her neck and a great muff that matched it. Puritively she pinched herself to make sure it was not a fantasy of the brain.

"It's five o'clock," announced the efficiency man. "Shall we drive in the park or take tea?"

"You decide," she murmured.

"Well drive."

It would have seemed logical, after his amazing afternoon's record, that the efficiency man should be in gay and trifling mood. He was not. He indulged in long silences, broken only by monosyllables, yet marked by frequent and disconcerting inspections of Constance. Sometimes he gazed at the bundles on the front seat. There was something grim in his mood.

Once he turned to her abruptly and said almost sharply:

"I wish you would wear blue more frequently."

Constance widened her eyes, then stammered:

"Why—why?"

"Suits you."

"And—do you like it, Mr. Hedge?"

He did not appear to hear, having relapsed into another of his silences.

The number of parcels which were removed from the car as it stopped at last in front of the Brooke mansion ousted Horace to display a surprise that is inexpressible in any experienced butler. H. Hedge did not notice this, however.

He walked directly to the library and began going through the afternoon mail. Constance hurried to her rooms, where she soon had Matilda bringing out for inspection every dinner gown that she possessed.

She chose a blue one.

The efficiency man had little to say during the evening meal. He did not fail to observe the gown, but he made no comment, as Constance rather hoped he would. He was unnaturally preoccupied, so that he forgot to tell Horace that he took seven unnecessary steps in walking from the sideboard to the table.

Waukegan Murder Case Nears Jury

Waukegan, Ill., Nov. 24.—(AP)—Clara Harca, her husband, Albert Harca, and Arthur Holt, her stepfather, will look to the jury trying them for the murder of Holt's wife, Mrs. Millie Holt, some time today for their fate. Closing arguments were being rapidly brought to a close with J. G. Welch, lead of defense counsel, attacking the murder charge.

The only evidence presented, Welch said, showed that Mrs. Holt was alone in the dining room of her Fox Lake home, Sept. 20, when she was shot three times in the body and once in the mouth.

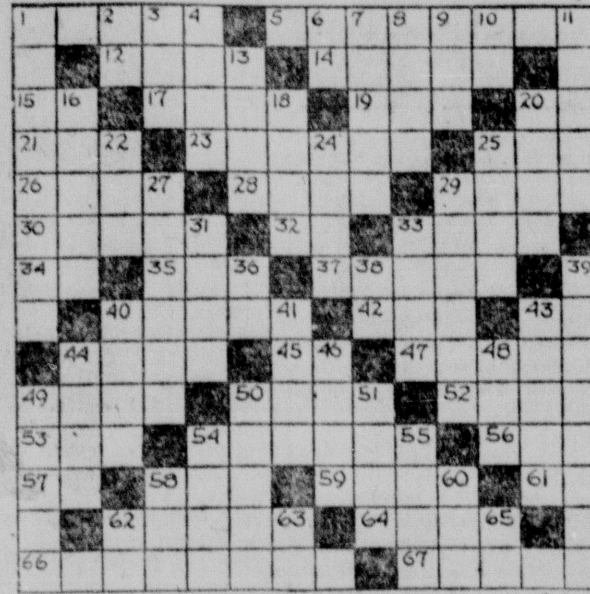

Her husband and daughter were 15 feet away in adjoining rooms," he declared, "while powder about two of the wounds indicate that if Mrs. Holt did not fire the shots herself, the persons who did must have been very close to her."

Accepting in argument the state's contention that Mrs. Holt's body was carefully laid out on the dining room floor, in a place removed from the scene of the shooting, Welch demanded to know where the spot was—since he declared, the only evidence of the shooting was found where the body lay when police entered after the shooting.

Col. A. V. Smith, state's attorney, will begin his final arguments this afternoon with expectations that the jury will have the case before night.
